The people below are looking for a working holiday. Read the information about the people and the holidays, and choose the best holiday for each person. Choose the correct answer (A, B, C, or D) for each question (1–6).

Working Holidays

A Nairobi

This two-week project in Nairobi, Kenya, is specially designed for families, although couples are also welcome. The work includes walking and driving through the area as you try to spot individual rhinos, record the movement of giraffes, and study the behaviour of elephants. It could transform your family from computer addicts into active environmentalists. Accommodation and food is provided, but not flights.

B Liverpool

In this one-week working holiday for adults, you will be clearing the banks of the river Mersey in Liverpool, England. Plants here are growing out of control and causing problems for both wildlife and boats, so you will be digging them up and burning them on the beach nearby. If you are interested, you can also join beach-cleaning parties and take part in a sea-bird survey. Meals and good quality accommodation are included.

C Languedoc

Organic World is a project that brings volunteers and producers of organic food together. The idea is simple: you provide the hard work and your host provides meals and basic accommodation. The farm is in Languedoc, France and is situated in the mountains, not far from the sea. You will help to grow organic vegetables, carry out general repairs on equipment, and feed the sheep and chickens. Volunteers are welcome to stay as long as they like.

D Maissade

The Family Centre in the town of Maissade, Haiti, provides daycare for children. This means that their mothers can work on local farms to support their families. The project is open all year round and the Centre only takes volunteers for a minimum of three weeks. Beginners' conversation classes are organized so that volunteers are able to talk to the children they are working with, and the accommodation provided is with families in the town. Weekend trips to the surrounding countryside are also available – a great opportunity to see the interesting wildlife of Haiti.

Reading Part 3

Read the article about ballooning. Six sentences are missing from the text. Choose the correct sentence (A–G) for each gap (1–6). There is one extra sentence which you do not need to use.

Balloon adventures

Sandy Thompson looks at the history of cluster ballooning.

The first ever balloon flight carrying passengers was made in 1783 by the Montgolfier brothers. They used hot air to float the balloon over 1000m into the sky. Now, the latest ballooning sport is called 'cluster ballooning'; instead of hot air, helium gas is used, and instead of one big balloon, hundreds of small balloons are used.

One cluster balloon enthusiast is James Ede. In one of his recent adventures, James flew his cluster balloons across the largest area of mountains in Europe, the Alps. This was not his first flight, though.¹

But even more than that, his greatest love is to go on cluster ballooning adventures.

According to James, there is no better way to fly. "Cluster ballooning is spectacular and is quite different from the first balloon flights.² As a result, it's possible to hear things that are many kilometres away".

Today, cluster ballooning is a safe way to travel, but that wasn't the case for the first ever cluster balloon flight.

The first person to do it was a truck driver called Larry Walters. Larry had wanted to fly from a very early age and he was just a boy when he first thought of using balloons to do this.³

One day, Larry decided to do an experiment. He wanted to try to fly a few metres above his garden, so he bought forty-five balloons, filled them with helium gas and tied them to a garden chair. He sat in the chair and cut the rope holding it to the ground.⁴ Instead of only rising a few metres, the chair – with Larry sitting in it – floated over 3km into the sky.

Larry floated above the clouds for hours, with no control over the balloons. Although he had a bottle of water with him, unluckily for him he wasn't wearing a coat.

.....⁵ Larry realized that he might freeze if he didn't do something soon.

The wind was strong and Larry began to float towards the sea. Things were getting dangerous, but suddenly the wind changed.⁶ Soon the balloons were back safely on the ground. It had been an amazing adventure and the story of the flight soon became big news. The sport of cluster ballooning was born.

- A As the temperature dropped, the situation became more serious.
- B But there was an unexpected problem.
- C It started to blow him towards the local airport.
- D Old-fashioned hot-air balloons made a terrible noise, but cluster balloons tend to be totally silent.
- E In fact, it was the most incredible thing he'd ever done.
- F He'd always been interested in flying and gained his pilot's licence many years ago.
- G However, it took almost twenty years for the dream to finally come true.

Reading Part 4

Read the article about television. For questions 1–4, choose the correct answer (A, B, or C).

Is television a good thing?

Graham Astley investigates the effects of television.

Last month, high school teacher Charles Tandy gave away his television. "I'm not the sort of person who thinks that television is a complete waste of time – some programmes can actually be quite educational," he says. "I just wanted to be able to have more conversations with my friends and family, and TV prevents you doing that." He is not alone in worrying about television. Many parents, for example, feel that a lot of programmes aren't suitable for their children.

But some experts are now arguing that television is making the world a better place. Paul Wood, an Australian psychologist, has studied the effect of TV in many different countries. He says that educational programmes don't bring many benefits. However, popular dramas about everyday life are helping to improve people's lives in various ways. He says, for example, that such programmes increase understanding about the sorts of problems that teenagers have, particularly ones that damage their education.

Lucan Hobbs, professor of media studies, says that the issues that surround TV may be even wider.

"In some countries, popular music competitions and reality shows have made many people believe that anyone can be famous, even though this may not be true. This is having a big effect on the way young people see society and could continue to do so in the future," he says.

There may be one final reason why people see TV differently. Over the last 50 or 60 years, the world has learned to deal with TV. We realize that it can bring a few benefits and we are no longer afraid of it. But now there is something else to consider – the internet. By comparison, the gentle television set in the corner of every sitting room seems almost friendly.

 - A He thought television was bad for his children.
 - B He preferred to spend his time talking to people.
 - C He was disappointed with the quality of programmes.
- 2 What does Paul Wood say about TV?

 - B It should be used more widely by school teachers.
 - C It can bring a range of benefits to society.
- 3 Lucan Hobbs thinks that television ...
 - A is changing the way young people think.
 - B is becoming more popular with young people.
 - C is making a lot of young people famous.
- 4 What is the writer's main point in the last paragraph?
 - A The internet reaches a lot more people than TV.
 - B The internet will change the way people watch TV.
 - C The internet may bring more problems for people than TV.
